The Importance of Monument Preservation

Over time, headstones and monuments become discolored, worn and un-level. As a result, the stones become hard to read and lose clarity. In order to ensure that generations to come can pay respect to your loved ones, headstones need to be cleaned and cared for regularly.

Cemeteries offer perpetual care, however, that does not mean that the monuments will receive the care they require. Cemeteries may offer care services such as road maintenance and landscape, but rarely does it include cleaning, leveling and repainting of the headstones.

Hiring a professional monument preservation service is the only way to fully ensure that a headstone will be cleaned and restored properly. Although it is possible to service a headstone yourself, it is not recommended. Special cleaning solutions, tools and techniques are required to ensure that a monument does not obtain any additional damage.

How to know if you need a headstone cleaned?

No two monuments are ever the same. There will always be different variables such as stone type, weather, placing and ground conditions.

As a result, it is hard to say when a stone will typically need to be serviced. However, it is certain that over time algae and debris build up on the headstones and can degrade the integrity of the stone.

In order to keep your monument in lasting condition, it is crucial to have the stone cleaned and/ or leveled. This helps to ensure that your loved one's monument has the best chance to stand up against the test of time.

We want just that. Your loved one's stone to last as long as possible. At DeFoor Monument Preservation, we understand the importance of carefully servicing headstones and monuments. We are dedicated to handling each stone with courtesy.
